

WILL HE GIVE UP IN THE END?

All Of The Administration's Pet Measures Are Defeated In The Legislature.

WILL THE GOVERNOR RESIGN NOW?

Question Is Raised, Is Not This The Unforeseen Circumstance That May Keep Him In The State?

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Dec. 14.—Governor La Follette bumped the bumps in both houses of the legislature yesterday, and after his defeated supporters recovered themselves sufficiently to survey the situation they found that every political measure urged by the governor in his message to the specially convened legislature had been defeated. The senate by an overwhelming vote, 11 to 19, killed the general investigation resolution, providing for a sweeping probe into life insurance, railroad and other corporations and political committees and organizations. Tuesday the assembly, by the close vote of 43 to 42, defeated the "cumulative" or "second choice" primary election bill, called the "Mary Ann" or "How Old Is Ann" bill because of the complicated nature of the proposition. Announcement was made that an attempt at resuscitation would be made yesterday by means of a vote for reconsideration, but the prospect of success was so slight that no vote was taken and the matter will come up again today. Two ballot reform bills, either of which would have tolerably well satisfied the demands of the governor, were defeated by decisive votes in the assembly yesterday. One was fashioned after the Massachusetts law, and was defeated by a vote of 48 to 35. The other was adapted from the Minnesota law. It went by the board on a vote of 58 to 27. This makes four bumps for the administration program. All the bills that will pass at this extra session will be of minor importance and free from politics, except the capitol building bill, to which the assembly yesterday, by a vote of 64 to 24, tacked an amendment proposed by the social democrats, providing that in all contracts for the building a clause be inserted limiting the working day to eight hours. Speaker Lenroot championed this amendment and it may be a bit of politics for him to be used in his canvass for the governorship with which to attract the labor vote.

The special session is practically over and both sides in the Wisconsin republican factional alignment claim that they are satisfied. The anti-administration people are the more jubilant, because they have been able to defeat the reforms demanded by Governor La Follette, and particularly because they have accomplished this largely in the assembly, which was supposed to be La Follette's own, and they did not have to rely upon the more evenly divided senate. The administration people admit that the registration changes they sought in the primary election and form of general election ballot, as well as the proposed investigation of the insurance and railroad corporations, have been prevented by the opposition. They charge that it was the presence of the hand of W. D. Connor of Marshfield, working through the personal presence of his brother, Robert Connor, combined with the gubernatorial aspirations of Senators McGillivray and Hatten, that defeated the measures advocated by the administration. They express complacency, however, because they say the situation gives La Follette the opportunity to remain with better grace in the fight in this state and keep his guiding hand on the affairs of the party.

It is said that Governor La Follette is already working on a special message to be delivered to the legislature after the last business is transacted. What the message will be, in fact it will materialize, is a matter of speculation for no hint of its character has been passed out even to those who are supposed to be in the confidence of the administration. Some conjecture that it will be a declaration of continued warfare, while others do so far as to predict that the governor will withdraw his acceptance of the United States senatorship and remain in Wisconsin to make a fourth run for governor. As to the wisdom of such a decision, opinion here is largely adverse. In the first place it is believed that in the present disturbed situation in the La Follette ranks he could not exert a determining influence in the election of the United States senator and the opposition is strongly confident that he would be defeated ignominiously if he were to seek another term in the executive office. His friends say there is no thought and no necessity for such a course, that he means what he said when he declared that he would resign the governorship, and go to Washington, and that he can as well maintain the leadership here while in the senate as though he remained in Wisconsin.

The defeat of the "second choice" amendment to the primary election law emphasizes the necessity of the governor's secretary, Col. Hannan, the house's secretary, and the state house inspector as guilty of dragging members down to the governor's office to bribe them with promises of federal positions.

A Great Speech

Pliny Norcross made a great speech this afternoon against the "Mary Ann" bill, reading the law against personal lobbying on the floor of the house and naming Col. Hannan, the governor's secretary, and the state house inspector as guilty of dragging members down to the governor's office to bribe them with promises of federal positions.

Special Message

The governor is writing a special message. The subject is unannounced, but it is said he has reconsidered his intention to go the senate because the legislature has defeated all his favorite measures. The extra session will close tonight or tomorrow.

Why Churches Are Locked.

Several rural clergymen at a diocesan conference at Carlisle, England, recently stated that the reason churches were kept locked up on week days was to prevent sheep coming in. One remarked, with some bitterness, that he kept his church open all the time because he had carried off his offertory box.

Ever Flip a Double-Header Cent?

An old maid never loses interest in the man she might have married. If he succeeds she prides herself on the fact that she could have had him. If he fails she is equally proud of the fact that she had foreseen enough to turn him down.—Detroit Free Press.

If you notice, there is only a thin line between these two individuals. It's a hold-up in either case for Mr. Young-me.

The four chief demands which the miners will make of the operators are as follows: First—a recognition of the miners' union by the operators, the recognition to take the form of a signed agreement; Second—the substitution of an eight-hour day for the nine-hour work-day awarded by the strike commission, which is now in force throughout the hard coal fields; Third—an increase in pay over the minimum wages now paid to men and boys who are not contract miners, but who are generally classed as unskilled labor; Fourth—a uniform scale of wages for workers, not actually miners, at all collieries.

FLAYS SYSTEM AS IT EXISTS

United States Infantry Officer Criticises Military System As It Now Is.

HE FINDS THE IDEAL UNDER KINGS

Shows Decided Contempt Of Democratic Methods In The United States In Address Before Military Institution.

New York, Dec. 14.—Praising military organization under a monarch as ideal, and showing his contempt of the American army and its democratic methods, Lieut. Col. James S. Pettit of the Eighth United States Infantry delivered a radical and startling address before the Military Service Institution of the United States on Governor's island.

He said the United States military policy is so bad that the safety of the country is due solely to the watchful care of Providence. He made many sarcastic comments on the army, in analyzing his system, and pointed out the weak spots in proposing a larger standing army.

Col. Pettit has a reputation as a writer on military affairs. His latest essay is "How far does democracy affect the organization and discipline of our armies, and how can its influence be most effectively utilized?"

This was submitted in competition with other papers by members of the military service institution and received a prize. It was read before the institution.

Officers Ignorant of War.

"Men who do not think of taking their watches to a blacksmith for repairs or their sick to a tailor for treatment," said Lieut. Col. Pettit, "complacently, yet enthusiastically, send their sons and brothers to death under officers utterly ignorant of war and the care of men in camp and in field and most of all, men selected for such commands accept them, knowing they are perfectly incompetent to administer them, and the hospitals soon bear grewsome testimony of their incompetence."

"It is a self-evident proposition that a democracy, based on the will of millions of people, expressed through devices changing channels, cannot be so skillful or as efficient in the conduct of military affairs as a monarchy headed by a wise, powerful chief. The essence of military strength is 'one man power.'"

Sees Good in Monarchy.

"A monarchy is more permanent and can therefore establish a fixed military policy, so necessary to the building up of an army. The sovereign is not fettered by the spoils system, nor indebted to politicians for his office. With our great monarchies the problems of organization and discipline are easy. In these respects monarchical governments have the advantage."

"On the other hand democracies as a rule represent peace. Their proper military policy, therefore, is preparation for defense."

In discussing the military tactics of the different wars engaged in by the United States, Lieut. Col. Pettit said in every war, because of lack of discipline and ignorance of military science, the victories were won largely by luck.

He added: "The safety and freedom of a country with such a military policy are due solely to the watchful care of Providence," and continued: "The Spanish-American war found us in the same condition as in 1861. No army, no supplies."

"Providence again saved us. Our enemy was a cripple, and a few thousand fine regular troops ended the war, while the raw levies were sweltering in torrid camps without enough discipline to keep them in sanitary condition and the administration having night-sweats over the political effect on the country until it relieved itself by harking back to the evils of the rebellion."

"It is an undoubted fact that the promotions and appointments made incident to this war seriously affected the morale and discipline of the commissioned strength of the army."

MIDSHIPMAN HAZED AT NAVAL ACADEMY

Rear Admiral Sands Suspends Two Members of Upper Class and Recommends Punishment.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 14.—The midshipman at the United States naval academy have resumed hazing in the most violent form.

Midshipman Jerome P. Coughlin, from Tennessee, was found unconscious in his room Wednesday morning after being hazed by upper classmen.

As a result of the affair Midshipman Tremore Coffin Jr. of Nevada and Warren A. Vandewater of New Jersey have been suspended. Within an hour after their suspension Rear Admiral Sands had sent to the navy department at Washington his recommendation for their final punishment. The penalty for hazing is dismissal.

Another case of possible hazing came to the attention of naval academy officers to-day when Midshipman Henry G. Cooper of North Carolina was stricken with paralysis in a classroom. He is in the hospital, and denies that he had been hazed, but it is well known that midshipmen will go to any length to protect their persecutors.

LONGWORTH SAYS HE IS IN A TRANCE YET

Future Husband of Miss Roosevelt Does Not Remember When He Became Engaged.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPTS-D'HAEL.]

Washington, Dec. 14.—The senate committee on finance this morning agreed to report favorably on a bill to make the Panama bonds available for deposit on the basis of a national bank circulation on the same terms as existing for two per cent. consols. Congressman Longworth is swamped with congratulations this morning. When asked when he had plighted his troth, he could not tell and said he had been in a trance so long he got his dates mixed. He said all the plans for the wedding were in the hands of the Roosevelts. They will take only a short trip until after congress has adjourned and will then perhaps go to Europe. He says there will be no family trouble on account of political differences with the President, because they do not differ.

Gilbert Hoffman, aged 4, accidentally knocked over a shotgun, the discharge killing his brother, who was ill in the same room, at Prairie City, Ind.

Benjamin Burnett, a workman on the Evansville and Mount Vernon traction line near Evansville, Ind., struck an abandoned charge of dynamite with his pick. It exploded and Burnett was fatally hurt.

President Henry S. Pritchett, the executive head of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has resigned. President Pritchett's retirement is prompted by the desire to devote his entire time to the Carnegie Foundation, of which he is president.

Edward C. Ryan, who was elected as the delegate of the American Society of the Isle of Pines to petition congress to annex the Isle of Pines to the United States, arrived in New York yesterday from Havana. Mr. Ryan said he believed 90 per cent of the island's population favored annexation.

Monument to Slain Man.

Columbia, S. C., Dec. 14.—Almost within a stone's throw of the place where he was killed Jan. 15, 1903, a monument from the people was unveiled to the memory of N. G. Gonzales, editor of the State. He was shot by Lieut. Gov. Tillman.

President Gordon of Howard university, Washington, has tendered his resignation to the board of trustees. This action is the culmination of the recent revolt of students at the institution, who objected to certain views entertained by the president on the subject of the negro.

MET THE GREAT AND ONLY TOGO

MRS. HIBBARD WRITES FROM JAPAN TO HER PARENTS.

SHOOK HANDS WITH ADMIRAL

Was Invited by American Minister Griscom to Reception at Legation.

In two recent letters to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Lowell, many interesting things in Japan, the naval celebration in honor of Admiral Togo upon his return and a meeting with this great hero himself are described by Mrs. C. V. Hibbard. The following extracts from the two missives will prove most interesting:

Are Now Neighbors to Togo. "Togo landed today. Tomorrow is a big naval review. All Tokyo is going. Continuing the next day Mrs. Hibbard says: 'As I sit here writing I can hear the booming of the guns like distant thunder. The noise comes from Yokohama where the great naval festival in honor of Togo and the Japanese fleet is taking place. It will be a great day and a historic one. I wish we could see it without going. I could not leave the children and Lisle has decided it not wise to go. Every flag is out today and there is an air of bustle and excited patriotism which is contagious. We find that the cause of all this, Togo himself, lives not very far from us in Tokyo.'

Attend Japanese Church. "Tokyo seems very different now for we rarely use a jirishiki. The cars give excellent service and take us most everywhere we want to go. It is such a saving of time, money and baggage. Things look quite metropolitan now with cars every minute or two and the medieval aspect is fast disappearing. We go to Japanese church now instead of English. I can't understand much but I hope to improve. Yesterday the pastor must have spoken very eloquently, for all around me were in tears. I got most of what he said and Lisle got most of it, so together did manage to know what it was about.

Disturbance Is All Over. "All I ever knew of the disturbance here in Tokyo was what Lisle told me and what I heard discussed after I came here. The only evidence that it ever was is the new little houses on corners where soldiers were stationed. The city was under military law when we arrived but I haven't noticed since. Everyone seems to regard it not so much as an anti-foreign demonstration as an anti-police one. Anyway it's all over now.

Were Guests of Griscom. "Mr. and Mrs. Hibbard were paid the high honor of being invited to the reception given for Admiral Togo at the American Legation by Minister and Mrs. Griscom. The 'bid' reads: 'The American Minister and Mrs. Griscom request the honor of Mr. and Mrs. Hibbard's company to meet Admiral Togo on Wednesday, Nov. 1 at 8:30 o'clock.' Something concerning this event is told in the appended portions of a letter written on the following day:

A Campaign of Receptions. "I must out with the greatest event of the season. Last night we went to the American legation in response to an invitation to meet Admiral Togo and saw and shook hands with the hero of the world today. It was all over so quickly that it didn't seem to amount to much after all, yet I shall never forget that tiny little figure and that iron gray hair the brown face and the teeth that showed exposure. He doesn't look so much like his pictures as I thought he would—older and not so good looking. I fancy his campaign of receptions and flonizing is harder for him than the deck and the battleship and the smell of powder. Over two hundred Americans shook his hand last night; and that reception was only one of many. There was gold braid and swords galore, and sashies more than I have seen in years. Everything from the extreme décolleté of the swells to the modest missionary back in the corner.

Congratulated Mr. Hibbard. "We were introduced to some Japanese in the Foreign office. One said, Mr. Hibbard is known at the office as the 'Barber of the Army.' I think he meant it as a compliment too. That particular part of his work seems to have surprised everybody more than any other. Lisle's place among the Japanese is quite a different one than he had two years ago. Among the foreigners, too. Not a few last night gave him a warm hand grasp and a hearty ap-

FASHION NOTES FROM PARIS.

Pretty Frocks That Indicate in Which Direction the Wind of Fashion Blows.

Since what is worn in Paris is the correct apparel for all the world fashionable, we must concede new honors to the princess frock, which has received a surfeit of popular favor this season. Its rapidly increasing vogue, however, may be attributed to the cleverness with which the couturiers have overcome the obstacles which made this stately design unbecoming to so many figures—obstacles of figure, of carriage, of height, of breadth and so on through the category of feminine imperfections.

It requires skill to adapt some of the newest modes to the varying forms of womanhood, and the French modistes are past masters in the art of gown building for the simple reason that they are so consummately skilled in this great accomplishment. It is claimed for them, and deservedly, that they can correct every defect except an undistinguished carriage, or a lack of the knowledge apparent in so many women, of knowing how to wear their gowns advantageously, but even in this, any woman who follows their instructions can overcome the defect.

And nowhere does this defect appear so lamentably as when one attempts to wear in princess frock. The princess is necessarily a design of gracefulness and stateliness; to do it justice it must be worn with the shoulders erect, the head correctly poised and with a freedom of movement borrowed from the goddess Diana. Then and only then is the princess a complete success.

But we must not be carried away with the enthusiasm of a graceful carriage to the extent of omitting a description of some of the handsome gowns exhibited in the salons of the rue de la Paix and in the rue Royale. Brown in a most delightful shade known as cinnamon, seems destined to be the recipient of great favor among the elite of fashion. It is shown in a number of dainty frocks of various design and appears to best advantage in a princess model of chiffon cloth. The skirt is fitted about the hips by means of vertical tucks grouped three each at the sides and back. These tucks continue below the hips where they are released and emerge into the soft folds of the skirt. Around the bottom, several inches from the hem, there are exquisite appliques of coral lace with the design worked out in brown and red threads and these appliques are put on irregularly so that applied tucks of soft brown satin can be scalloped about them in charming design. The lowest of these false tucks is finished with a ruffle of plaited chiffon, below which there is another tuck running around the bottom of the skirt in a straight line, with another frill of chiffon at the very edge of the skirt.

Above the waistline the corsage is outlined in bolero effect with insertions of the embroidered lace employed in the embellishment of the skirt, and the lace follows an upward direction at the front, meeting at the bustline simulated revers of embroidery and lace. A chemise of delicate thread lace, made in one, adds an exquisite touch to the decorative scheme of the design. This is one of the newest ideas of the French couturiers, this harmonizing the chemise with the general scheme of the costume. Some of the shops are showing these accessories in mouseline de sole and lace, matched to the materials used for smart frocks; they are cut down a bit at the neck and finished with a white lace plastron and collar.

The sleeve of the dress in question is a triumph of the dressmaker's art, consisting of a puff of the chiffon cloth inset with lace modulations aided by fine tucks and gathered slightly at the elbow into a directoire cuff of heavy French lace piped with bands of brown satin.

Good coffee, a bit of sausage and a plate of Mrs. Austin's Buckwheat cakes makes a perfect breakfast.

General Railroad News.

New York.—Although it has been overshadowed to a great extent by the reports of the insurance investigation, the recent action of the Erie railroad rescinding the purchase of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton system has caused a considerable flutter in railroad circles. It is also stated that the Erie's action was the result of the re-awakened public conscience as to the duties of directors resulting from the work of the insurance investigating committee. Now, no doubt, will begin a lively fight for this system, which has been handed about among various syndicates of financiers and railroad men. Plans are being formulated, it is understood which, when fully developed will result in a lively and formidable opposition to the control of Morgan interests in the Erie road, which has dropped the C. H. & D.

The statement that James J. Hill, Jr., will succeed to the presidency of the Great Northern railroad at the beginning of the year caused but little surprise, for it has long been known that Mr. Hill was studiously training his son for the post. Geo. T. Slade, son-in-law of James J. Hill, it is expected, will become superintendent of the same road.

Within the last seven years traffic on the Harriman system of roads has increased four-fold. Officials say that under the hardest times the tonnage will never return to the old figures. The bulk of the live stock traffic is out of the way for the season, and the worst of the pressure is over. Barring heavy snowstorms the danger of blockades for the year has passed.

It is said that the west is honey-combed with all sorts of railroad projects, the sole purpose of the promoters of which is to sell them to the big railroads, voluntarily or under compulsion. There are probably a dozen such lines in Illinois and as many more in Iowa and Nebraska. The Pacific coast is a hotbed for them.

A foreclosure sale of the Texas Southern has been postponed pending the result of a suit brought by Mrs. Julia C. Harle, of New York, to establish her alleged ownership of 12 miles of the road out of Marshall, Texas. In the meantime President Marshall hopes to refinance the property and prevent its sale. It is said, however, it is likely to be bought by the Missouri, Kansas & Texas.

MAKES APPLICATION TO ENTER SOLDIERS' HOME

Patsy Griffin Hopes to Spend Remaining Days in Quiet Precincts of Waupaca.

Patsy Griffin, a long-time resident of Janesville and a character familiar to everyone for years, has made application to enter the Soldiers' Home at Waupaca, and unless he changes his mind will go thither as soon as favorable action is taken in his case. He was a brave soldier in the Civil War and at its close he settled in Janesville to engage in the draying business. Some years ago he was compelled by poor health to give up this occupation. Since that time he has often sought the sheltering roof of the city hall. The officers have usually been very kind to him.

QUEER REVIEW OF "PASSING SHOWS"

Not "Alice in the Wonderland," But Something Equally Marvelous Is Depicted.

When the "Smart Set" started on their journey around the world their intention was to see "The Passing Show" from "The Black Crook" down to "Fantasia," and from "The Crossing" to "The Turn in the Road." After disposing of "The Lost Mine" at "The Devil's Auction," they interviewed "The Banker's Daughter" and decided to hold a benefit performance for themselves and "The Two Opuntias" to defray the expenses of the trip "Across the Continent." "The Royal Chic" prepared the feast "In the House That Jack Built" and "The Chaperons" acted the part of "The Master of Ceremonies." When the cards were sent out it was like "Sowing the Wind," so numerous were the invitations. It was "When Knight-hood Was in Flower" and "In Sight of St. Paul's." The feast was spread and a "Texas Steer" was prepared by "The Head of Man." "Forbidden Fruit" was also served. The light was furnished by "The Flaming Arrow" and "Cris and the Wonderful Lamp."

It was "The Greatest Thing in the World," "The Tenderfoot," "The Vinegar Boy," "The Runaway Girl," "The Beauty Doctor," "Foxy Quiller," "The Sambo Girl," "Ally and the Eight Princesses," "Dolly and the Little Princess," "The Rose of the Alhambra," "The Carpet Bagger," "She," and "A Royal Slave," served the guests. Music was furnished by "The Serenaders." Each guest received as a souvenir "The Silver Slipper." "On the Stroke of Twelve" the guests began to arrive. First came "The Earl and the Girl" and "The Runaways," then "Happy Hooligan" and "An Aristocratic Tramp," followed by "Two Merry Tramps" and "My Wife's Family." Next came "An American Gentleman" with "Young Mrs. Winthrop," which caused something of a stir till "My Friend from India" and "Our Parson" said it was "Much Ado About Nothing." Then came "Nathan Hale" and "The Rose of Killarney," also "The Two Johns" and "Cloopara" wearing "The Great White Diamond" followed closely by "The High Rollers" and "Little John Jones" and "Fris," also "David's Ram," who had spent "His Last Dollar" at the "Kew-Fair" betting on "The Great Brooklyn Handicap" and "The New Lost in the Shadows of a Great City." Then came "His Grace De Grammont" and "A Poor Ruler," "The Man from Mexico" and "The Girl from up There." Next came "The Maid and the Mummy" and "The Two Vagabonds," "Puddin'-head Wilson" with "The Katzenjammer Kids," "The Children of the Grotto," "The Waifs of New York" and "The Whole Damn Family." After a season came "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" with "21 Stelbins" from "The Dairy Farm."

Then came "The Wrong Mr. Wright" and "Sister Mary," which caused another sensation. "Too Much Johnson" was whispered around, but "The Girl and the Judge" called the house to order and "The County Chairman" referred to "Article 37" and after they produced "A Marriage Certificate," signed by "The Little Minister" and it came their "Fair of Kids," they were seated by "His Honor, the Mayor." Next came "Sis Hopkins" and "Uncle Josh Sprucey" from "Sis Farm," "The Fairy Lady," and "Secret Service," also "The Gozer of Geol" and "The Gully Mother" with "The Rajah," "Dora Thorne" and "Queens." Just behind them came "The Miller's Daughter," "The Bohemian Girl" and "Paul and Virginia," also "The Prince of Tailors" and "The Senator's Daughter" wearing "The Sign of the Cross," also "The Girl and the Bandit," "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "The True Guardsman." Then came "Quincy Adams Sawyer" from "Shenandoah," with "Sunny Jim" from "Spotless Town" and "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

It was "Wise, Women and Song" till "Just Before Dawn," when the company retired to their "Cozy Corners." The following morning they hoarded "H. M. S. Pynar" that sailed "Under Two Flags" "The Black Flag" and a "Milk White Flag" for "The Sidewalks of Merry New York." They then started on their journey "Way Down East" with all "The Tramp of an Empire," "The Tramp of the Streets" and "The distance to 'The County Fair' and were informed that if they took "The Limited Mail" it was "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway."

So they proceeded down "Lovers' Lane" to "The Heart of Maryland," pausing at "Pine Ridge" to see "The Virginians." Then boarding "The Midnight Flyer" they visited "The Moonshiners" "In Old Kentucky" and after bumping over "The Knobs of Tennessee" rode on to see "Alice of Old Vincennes" and "The Gentleman from Indiana." Taking "The Fast Mail" they entered "The Heart of Chicago" and down through "Old Missouri" "Under Southern Skies" through "Alabama," "Texas" and "Arizona" with a stop-over in "Utah" to see "The Danites." In "California" they were held up by "The Highwayman" and "The Queen of the Highway." But by taking "A Desperate Chance" made their escape. "A Trip to Chinatown" was next on the program to see "The King of the Opium Ring" and "The Lost Paradise."

After the "Twelfth Night" they started across the Pacific to see "The Sultan of Sulu," then to Japan to hear "A Japanese Nightingale" and interview "The Marquis of San Tor" and "The Darling of the Gods." They went to see "A Chinese Honeymoon." After viewing "The Idol's Eve" they passed on through "Siberia," "Darkness Russia" called on "Rudolph and Adolph" through "Gay Paree," shared the politeness of "Gaston and Alphonse" and under escort of "The Three Musketeers" visited "Camille" and "The Parisian Princess," and returned "When London Sleeps," now happy, each one "A Contented Woman" and in "Sweet Clover" since they had learned "Why Smith Left Home" and had solved "The Mystery of Woodlawn." ## Wonders of a Modern Factory

Machinery Does the Work of Human Hands and the Perfect Food Cleanliness.

A visit to the greatest modern food factory is a revelation to anyone not familiar with the development of machinery in recent years. Such a visit verifies the claims of the manufacturers of Malta-Vita, that this perfect whole-wheat food is cooked, steamed, mixed, baked and packed in absolute cleanliness.

"Purity" is the watchword of this wonderful establishment. From the time the wheat is received in the factory until the finished product is shipped out to all parts of the world, Malta-Vita is not soiled by human hands. Machinery, clean, shining machinery, conveys the wheat through all the long process, even to the packing and sealing of the air-tight, germ-proof dirt-proof packages.

After the wheat has been thoroughly cooked and steamed it is mixed with pure barley malt extract, and each grain of the malted wheat is rolled into a water-like flake. Then it goes to the great ovens where, under intense heat, it is baked crisp and brown—Malta-Vita, the most delicious and most healthful food in the world. Malta-Vita is always ready to eat. No cooking. No inconvenience. And you never tasted anything quite so good. Try a bowlful with cream or fruit. To those who have used it and know how delicious and sustaining Malta-Vita is a perfect breakfast, it is next to impossible without it, and it's just as good three times a day. All grocers sell Malta-Vita now at ten cents per package.

THE RUSSIAN MENACE

The situation in Russia has undoubtedly become a menace to the whole world. No nation of the size of Russia can suffer as she is doing from complete collapse and a widespread revolt against the existing government, without affecting unfavorably the interests of all countries.

It should not be forgotten, however, that Russia is the greatest nation on the globe in point of territory, one of the greatest in population and one of the greatest in wealth. She alone has, with perhaps the single exception of the United States, the largest possibility of material growth. There is more rich, untapped land in Russia probably than in any other country on the globe.

Russia was so strong that, notwithstanding a year of disaster in her war with Japan, at the end of that year she was still stronger, financially than Japan. She could have continued the war for an indefinite period. While the liabilities of her government are large, yet the resources back of these liabilities are so great that, under other normal conditions, she would have no trouble in raising further loans. Her stock of gold amounts to $575,000,000, which is larger than that of any other European country, excepting France, which is Russia's financial ally and backer. It is estimated that she has $60,000,000 on deposit in foreign banks.

As to the ultimate standing of Russia there cannot be any doubt whatever. When she has passed through her present troubles and has established a government that obtains the confidence of her people, Russia will advance by leaps and bounds to a commanding international position. Meanwhile, however, her condition is deplorable in the extreme. The actual truth can only be conjectured, for the outside world knows only a part of what is going on, owing to the great collapse which has taken place and the stoppage of means of communication.

Mr. Gross, of the American Locomotive company, who has just returned from St. Petersburg, gives perhaps the best account of the conditions there which has yet appeared. In St. Petersburg, he says, all business is suspended; banks, theatres, schools, restaurants, newspapers, factories, telegraphs, telephones, light and water have all stopped. "The situation," he says "was a seething volcano when I left." Even hundreds of employees of the government have joined the ranks of the strikers. Vast assemblies of people meet in the streets and squares listening to exciting speeches. The czar himself is called the "little fool" instead of the "little father." Moreover, what is taking place is not a mere strike of employees asking for higher wages, but a strike of the people for a different form of government. It is in reality a revolution, and revolution that more nearly corresponds to the condition that existed in France near the end of the eighteenth century than any other revolution that has taken place. What makes the situation worse is the fact that the ignorant peasantry is even being stirred to revolt. What the outcome will be cannot be forecasted, except that there will come a time when the first demand of the people will be order rather than liberty, and almost any government will be welcomed that can achieve that. If Russia herself cannot restore peace there is at least a possibility of other European nations, notably Germany, stepping in and compelling a restoration of law and order.

Meanwhile the disturbances in Russia create an unsettled feeling in all the markets of the world. Of course, under present conditions Russia cannot raise the new loan, which a short time ago she was negotiating with foreign bankers. There is, indeed, some question as to her ability to pay promptly the interest upon her existing indebtedness, though there should be little doubt that there will be no violation of her foreign obligations by any government that may be instituted there. The interest would be paid ultimately whatever postponement there may be necessary at present, owing to the demoralization that exists. Nevertheless, with her large foreign deposits and banking connections in Paris and elsewhere it is not unlikely that she could make arrangements for the payment of her interest obligations for some time to come. There must, of course, be a general suspension of private payment of indebtedness, and this will undoubtedly cause embarrassment to commercial houses in Germany and elsewhere that may have had dealings with the Russian people.

The United States is far removed from Russia in the financial and commercial sense, and therefore interests here will be less affected by the disturbances than will the European markets. Nevertheless, anything that affects Paris, Berlin and London must necessarily be indirectly the cause of disturbance here. Hence the Russian situation has become an important factor in the financial situation here as well as abroad.

PEACE.

During the past year President Roosevelt has done much to advance the cause of peace by taking the first steps toward the reconvening of the Hague congress and by promoting the treaty of Portsmouth. It is not surprising, therefore, that he devotes four pages of his annual message to the subject of peace.

More and more, the president says, war is becoming to be looked upon as in itself "a lamentable and evil thing," and he devotes some hundreds of words to argument along these lines. But the president does not believe in peace at any price, and he has scant sympathy with sentimentalists who dread oppression less than physical sufferings, and prefer a shameful peace to a righteous peace. Therefore he believes that there could be no greater calamity than for the enlightened free peoples of the earth to disarm while yet leaving it open to any barbarism or despotism to remain unarmed. Therefore he believes that the armies and navies of those nations which stand for justice constitute the best security for a just peace.

In the main, the president is right in this statement. The nations must have sufficient power to maintain law and order internationally, just as within themselves they must possess the power to maintain law and order locally. The time, of course, is far distant when there can be complete disarmament. But surely the great civilized nations of the earth, the United States, Great Britain, France, Germany, to say nothing of the lesser powers, might reasonably take measures to reduce their armies and navies. The time does not seem to be too soon to make a beginning toward disarmament. Instead of that, the tendency of the time seems to be to increase the armies, and especially the navies, of the world, and this is adding an increased burden of taxation and military service upon the people.

It seems a pity that President Roosevelt, who has done so much for the cause of peace and who will do much more, could not in his message have made a definite recommendation to that end. He says, indeed, that it may be possible to exercise some check upon the tendency to swell indefinitely the budgets for military expenditure, but what would have been the point would have been the definite announcement of a plan for international cooperation in that direction. The president, however, believes that the new Hague conference will mark a new stride toward what he calls "the peace of justice."

In Memoriam

Whereas, The news of the death of our esteemed friend, and fellow-citizen, Harold W. Child, was received with deep regret by the leaf-to-bacco merchants of the city of Jansville, Wisconsin, and,

Whereas, The intimate relations long held by the deceased with the members of this exchange, render it proper that we should place upon record our appreciation of his services as a merchant, and his merits as a man. Therefore:

Resolved, That we deplore the loss of Harold W. Child with deep feelings of regret, softened only by the confident hope that his spirit is with those, who, having fought the good fight here, are enjoying perfect happiness in the better world.

Resolved, That we tender to his afflicted sister our sincere condolence, and our earnest sympathy in her affliction at the loss of a devoted brother. We realize keenly the loss of a whole-souled, broad-minded man of the strictest integrity, a man of many fine traits, who loved a quiet and unostentatious life, whose highest ambition was to help make the community better, sister, relatives, and friends happy, and to build up a successful and honorable business.

His demise will be lamented by a large circle of friends. The community has lost a successful and sturdy business man; the trade, a most honorable dealer.

Resolved, That a copy of the foregoing resolutions be transmitted to the sister, and relatives, and that copies be forwarded to the New York Leaf, Edgerton Tobacco Reporter, and local press for publication.

DEMOCRATS STIR HOUSE TURMOIL

Lamar and Shackelford Flay
Leader of Party in Long Speeches.

WILLIAMS' REPLY IS SARCASTIC

Refers to Egotism of L. Q. C. Lamar,
Which He Claims Was Justified by Drilliant Intellect, Lacking in the Florida Representative.

Washington, Dec. 14.—Wednesday was "wash day" in the house. Behind the turmoil is the effort of W. R. Hearst to rule the minority with a proxy for leader to succeed Williams. Representative Lamar of Florida, having secured one hour's time from the republican floor leader, Mr. Payne, made a sensational and bitter personal attack upon Mr. Williams' leadership of the minority. This attack followed Mr. Williams' recommendation to Speaker Cannon to take Lamar and Shackelford of Missouri off the committee on interstate and foreign commerce, on which they served in the last congress.

Lamar had been brooding over his transfer from the interstate and foreign commerce to foreign affairs committee since last Monday, when he made an attempt to air his grievances. The friends of Mr. Williams advised him against making an attack on the minority leader, but he was strongly urged by Hearst, and he made the attack. For three hours the house was entertained by criticisms and re-criticisms. While Mr. Lamar's remarks were made in anger, those of Mr. Williams were conciliatory, and made in the best of good humor.

Duel of Words Is Fierce.

The attack and counter attack was so fierce that at its conclusion Representative Cushman of Washington, in moving that the house adjourn, said: "At this time, and at the close of this fearful scene of democratic carnage on this floor, I would like to inquire if it would not now be in order, as a further mark of respect to the memory of all the late deceased, that this house do now adjourn."

Mr. Lamar, who was thoroughly angry, denied that he was lacking in party fealty. He denied that he violated the caucus order of his party in reporting the Hearst railroad bill to the house last year against the advice of Williams. Mr. Lamar's gestures were dramatic at times, especially when looking straight at Mr. Williams he accused him of bad faith in the calling of the railway rate caucus of last year.

In concluding he said that, unless Mr. Williams in some "just and proper way" submitted the accusation to those who had the right to judge, our personal friendship is dissolved.

Mr. Williams rose slowly to his feet, and, after saying that he would not regard anything personal which Mr. Lamar said, began: "The gentleman takes himself too seriously. He takes his position too seriously. A committee assignment is not a national issue. There were six men to be appointed to the committee on interstate and foreign commerce. I was the titular leader. The power and responsibility of appointing these six men rested with me."

Williams Flays Lamar. "I will leave it to school children, anybody, to the Republicans: I will leave it to fools to answer. And would I not have been a fool, would I not have been utterly asinine, unworthy, and void of moral courage, if, knowing as I did the personnel of the committee—it stood four one way and two the other—I had reappointed every one of them to present a ridiculous and divided front upon the great question upon which the Democracy is more nearly united than it has been for years?"

"The gentleman, I say again, takes himself too seriously. The late L. Q. C. Lamar of my state, who was his ancestor, possessed one trait which the gentleman from Florida possesses and one trait which he does not possess. The great L. Q. C. Lamar possessed a superb egotism, but he was justified in it because of his magnificent intellect."

The house roared with laughter at this allusion of Mr. Williams, and he continued: "Had the Hearst bill been endorsed by the caucus I would have supported it as warmly as I did the Davy bill."

Mr. Williams closed his speech with what some members interpreted as a threat. He said his grandfather had told him as a boy: "John, never insult any one except when the insult can be immediately resented."

Mr. Lamar asked for fifteen minutes to reply, but objection was made by a member from South Carolina.

At the solicitation of Mr. Williams the objection was withdrawn, and Mr. Lamar at once launched into a speech of personal abuse. It was received in the coldest silence by the Democrats, who had taken every opportunity to applaud Mr. Williams.

Down With the Bosses.

Representative Shackelford of Missouri, who, too, was removed from the interstate and foreign commerce committee, made a speech of an hour. Speaking of Mr. Williams, he said that out in Missouri "we have raised the cry 'Down with the bosses,' and the wishes of his constituents were more to him than the leadership of Mr. Williams."

Continuing his denunciation of bosses, Mr. Shackelford said it was the McCallis and McCordys who prevented the election of W. J. Bryan as president, and that H. H. Rogers and J. C. Morgan would be delighted to have the Democracy of the country under the control of one boss.

"The word of one Missouri Democrat is equal to that of many bosses," was a remark of Mr. Shackelford in a statement of Mr. Williams denying the use of certain language at the St. Louis convention, when the real trouble between Lamar, Shackelford, Hearst and Williams began.

CRITICISE WALLACE.

Senators Are Informed That Data Furnished Is Valueless.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The work done by John F. Wallace as chief engineer of the Panama canal was severely criticised by Secretary Taft, Mr. Shonts and Mr. Stevens before the Senate committee. No actual excavation is now being done, Mr. Taft said. "Mr. Wallace did his work in the dry season," Mr. Shonts told the committee, "selecting easy work at the top of the Culebra cut, where he had great hauls. He misled himself and other people by taking the cost per cubic yard thus arrived at as being the unit of cost at which the whole work could be done." Mr. Shonts frequently attacked the methods of Mr. Wallace, declaring that excavation was costing with his plan and force as much as $1.50 a cubic yard in the wet season. "This was the work the present commission stopped. Estimates of the former chief engineer Mr. Shonts considered practically valueless. Mr. Wallace computed with his unit at 50 cents. With this he figured he would save on a sea level canal $30,000,000, as compared with previous estimates, and it was this which induced his commission to favor the sea-level project. Representative Mann introduced a bill abolishing the canal commission and giving the president power to carry on the work under one of the executive departments."

To Transfer Command.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The transfer of the command of the new protected cruiser Charleston from Capt. Herbert Winslow to Commander Cameron McR. Winslow, formerly naval aide to the president, will occur at Norfolk Dec. 20.

The death rate among Oneida Indians is considerably larger than that among the whites of Outagamie county. Figures of the mortality among the redskins during the last year show that 20 died out of every 1,000.

Your Life Current.

The power that gives you life and motion is the nerve force, or nerve fluid, located in the nerve cells of the brain, and sent out through the nerves to the various organs.

If you are tired, nervous, irritable, cannot sleep; have headache, feel stuffy, dull and melancholy, or have neuralgia, rheumatism, backache, periodical pains, indigestion, dyspepsia, stomach trouble, or the kidneys and liver are inactive, your life-current is weak.

Power-producing fuel is needed; something to increase nerve energy—strengthen the nerves. Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is the fuel you need. It feeds the nerves, produces nerve force, and restores vitality.

"When I began taking Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and Anti-Pain Pills I was confined to my bed. I had severe nervous spells, the result of two years illness with malaria. I gradually grew so weak that I was unable to sit up. The spells would commence with cold chills, and I would become weak and almost helpless. My circulation was poor. I had declared right along but grew weaker and weaker. The Nervine seemed to strengthen me right away and my circulation was better. I have taken in all seven bottles of the Nervine and I am entirely well."

Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails, he will refund your money.

SAY REBATING WAS PRACTICED

Chicago and Alton Company and Former Officials Are Indicted.

PAY FOR TERMINAL PRIVILEGES

Packing Firm at Kansas City Owned Tracks to Plant, Which Were Used by the Road, Rental Being Placed at $1 Per Car.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—The federal grand jury returned indictments against the Chicago & Alton Railway company, John N. Faichorn, former vice president of the road, and Fred A. Wann, former general freight agent of the same line. The transportation company and the former officials are charged with having paid rebates to the Schwarzschild & Sulzberger company on account of freight paid and tickets purchased for the officers and agents of the packing company.

Says Practice Is Legitimate.

"The arrangement the Alton road had with the firm of Schwarzschild & Sulzberger at Kansas City I considered to be perfectly legitimate and within the law," said Mr. Faichorn. "We were using the firm's tracks at Kansas City, having no tracks of our own to their plant. For these terminal privileges the Alton road paid at the rate of $1 a car. The vouchers were openly signed and there was no secrecy whatever maintained. We felt that in doing this we were only complying with a custom of many years standing and did not look upon it as in any sense a violation of either the interstate commerce law or the Elkins amendment."

"So far as the passenger fare charges are concerned, I can only say that it has been customary to grant free transportation to inspectors and other similar employees on the company's general business. We consider this no discrimination and never thought of it as anything but legitimate business policy long current."

"The government having heard of the practice desires, in my view, to make a test case. And I am informed that the Chicago & Alton, through its attorneys, will urge a speedy hearing."

Welcomes Light on Subject.

"Indeed, in my opinion, the action of the federal grand jury in returning the indictment is far from an unjustified evil. The case will have the utmost general interest and railroad men, especially traffic managers, all over the country will be among the first to welcome a final legal construction which will define many powers now left more or less vague. This cannot but result in a beneficial clearing of the atmosphere."

"So far as the outcome of the case is concerned, I feel certain that with all the conditions presented the law will hold that what was done was legitimately done and did not constitute a violation of the Elkins bill."

"Naturally the bringing of an indictment is more or less painful to all involved, but I have no apprehension whatever of the outcome of the investigation."

Specific Offenses Alleged.

Three specific violations of the law in the granting of rebates to the packing company are mentioned in the indictment. The railroad company is charged with having refunded $1 a car on forty-four cars of dressed beef shipped from Kansas City to various eastern points in December, 1902. A similar rebate is alleged to have been paid on twenty-three cars of dressed beef shipped from Kansas City in January, 1904.

The railroad company is also charged with having refunded $2,500 in passenger fares paid by the packing company between Jan. 1, 1903, and Sept. 1, 1904, by its officers and agents.

Dublin, Dec. 14.—The earl of Dudley, the retiring lord lieutenant of Ireland, left Dublin Wednesday, coincident with the arrival of his successor, the earl of Aberdeen. There was the usual state procession on through the streets, which were thronged with crowds and lined with military and police. There was no anti-demonstration. The earl of Aberdeen was accompanied by James Bryce, the new chief secretary for Ireland.

CHAPTER XVI.

MARTIGNY was lying back in his berth smoking a cigarette, and as I entered he motioned me to a seat on the locker.

"It was most kind of you to come," he said, with his old smile.

"It was only by accident I learned you were on board," I explained as I sat down. "You're getting better?"

"I believe so; though this physician is—that you call—an alarmist. Most of them are, indeed. The more desperate the illness the more renowned the cure! Is it not so? He has even forbidden me cigarettes, but I prefer to die than to do without them. Will you not have one?"

"Thank you," I said, selected one and lighted it. "Your cigarettes are not to be resisted. But if you are so ill why did you attempt the voyage?"

"A sudden call of business," he explained airily. "Unexpected, but—what you call—imperative."

"The doctor—it was he who mentioned your name to me. It was not on the sailing list?"

"No." He was looking at me sharply. "I came on board at the last moment—the need was very sudden, as I have said. I had not time to engage a stateroom."

He motioned me to a seat.

"That explains it. Well, the doctor told me that you were best fast."

"Yes; since the voyage began I have not left it."

I watched him as he went through the familiar motion of lighting a second cigarette from the first one. In the half light of the cabin I had not at first perceived how ill he looked.

"But you, Mistr Lester," he was saying. "How does it occur that you also are going to France? I did not know you contemplated?"

"No," I answered calmly, for I had seen that the question was inevitable, and I even welcomed it, since it gave me opportunity to get my guns going. "Not the last time I saw you I didn't contemplate it, but a good deal has happened since then. Would you care to hear?"

"Oh, how I relished tantalizing him!" I should like very exceedingly to hear," he assured me and shifted his position a little so that his face was in the shadow. The beams of light through the shutter makes my eyes to hurt," he added.

So he mistimed himself; so he was not finding the part an easy one either. The thought gave me new courage.

"You may remember," I began, "that I told you once that if I ever went to work on the Holladay case I'd try first to find the murderer. I succeeded in doing it the very first day."

"Ah!" he breathed. "And after the police had failed! That was, indeed, remarkable. How did you accomplish it?"

"By the merest chance; by great good fortune. I was making a search of the French quarter, house by house, when, on Houston street, I came to a restaurant, the Cafe Jourdain. A bottle of superior set Jourdain's tongue to wagging. I pretended I wanted a room. He dropped a word, the merest hint, and in the end I got the whole story. It seems there was not only one woman—there were two."

"Yes," and a man whose name was Bettany, or Bettune, or something like that. But I didn't pay much attention to him. He doesn't figure in the case. He didn't even go away with the woman. The very day I set out on my search he was picked up on the streets somewhere suffering with apoplexy and taken to a hospital, so nearly dead that it was a question whether he would recover. So he's out of it. The Jourdains told me that the women had sailed for France."

"You will pardon me," said my hearer, "but in what way did you make sure that they were the women you desired?"

"By the younger one's resemblance to Miss Holladay," I answered, lying with a guileless which surprised myself. "The Jourdains maintained that a photograph of Miss Holladay was really one of their lot."

"Ah, yes," he said. "That was exceedingly clever. I should never have thought of that. That is worthy of M. Leopold. And so you follow them to France; but surely you have some more definite address than that!"

"No," I said. "It seems rather a wild goose chase, doesn't it? But you could advise me, Mr. Martigny. Where would it be best for me to search for them?"

He did not answer for a moment, and I took advantage of the opportunity to select a second cigarette and light it. I dared not remain unoccupied.

"That," he began slowly at last, "seems to me a most—ah!—definite affair. Mistr Lester—to search for three people through all France. There seems little hope of success. Yet I should think it most likely that they have gone to Paris."

I nodded. "There was my own theory," I agreed, "but to find them in Paris seems also impossible."

"Not if one uses the police," he said. "But, my dear sir," I protested. "I can't use the police. Miss Holladay at least has committed no crime. She has simply chosen to go away without informing us."

"You will permit me to say then, Mistr Lester," he observed, with just a touch of irony, "that I fail to comprehend your anxiety concerning her."

I felt that I had made a mistake; that I had need to go carefully.

"It is not quite so simple as that," I explained. "The last time we saw Miss Holladay she told us that she was ill and intended to go to her country home for a rest. Instead of going there she sailed for France without informing any one—indeed, doing everything, she could to escape detection. That conduct seems so eccentric that we feel in duty bound to investigate it; besides, two days before she left she received from us a hundred thousand dollars in cash."

I saw him move uneasily on his bed. After all this advantage of mine was no small one.

"Ah," he said softly, and again, "ah! Yes, that seems peculiar, yet perhaps if you had waited for a letter?"

"Suppose we had waited and there had been no letter—suppose, in consequence of waiting, we should be too late?"

"Too late? Too late for what, Mistr Lester? What is it you fear for her?"

"I don't know," I answered, "but something—something. At least, we could not assume the responsibility of delay."

"No," he agreed, "perhaps not. You are doubtless quite right to investigate. I wish you success. I wish that I myself might aid you, there is so much of interest in the case to me, but I fear that it is impossible."

And he breathed a sigh, which was doubtless genuine enough.

"Will you go to Paris?" I asked.

"Oh, no; not at once. At Haver I shall meet my agent and transact my affairs with him. Then I shall seek some place of quiet along the coast."

"Yes," I said to myself, with leaping heart, "Eureka!" But I dared not speak the word.

"I shall write to you," he added, "when I have settled. Where do you stay at Paris?"

"We haven't decided yet," I said.

"Didn't I tell you? Mr. Royce, our junior partner, is with me."

"It is no matter where you stay," he said. "I shall write to you at the poste restante. I should like both you and your friend to be my guests before you return to America."

There was a courtesy, a cordiality in his tone which almost disarmed me. Such a finished scoundrel!

"We shall be glad to accept," I answered, knowing in my heart that the invitation would never be made.

I was ready to go. I had accomplished all I could hope to accomplish. If I had not already disarmed his suspicions, I could never do so.

"I am tiring you," I said, starting up. "No," he protested, "no." But his voice was almost inaudible.

"I will go," I said. "You must pardon me. I hope you will soon be better, and I closed the door behind me with his murmured thanks in my ears."

It was not till after dinner that I found opportunity to relate to Miss Kembell the details of my talk with Martigny.

"Why did you change your mind?" she asked.

"The adventure tempted me. Those are your own words. I thought perhaps I might be able to throw Martigny off the track."

"And do you think you succeeded?"

"I don't know," I answered doubtfully. "He may have seen clear through me."

"Oh, I don't believe him superhuman! I believe you succeeded."

"Yes, and you must keep up the deception till the last moment. Remember, he will be watching you."

"I'll do my best," I said.

Coming Fights.

Old Timers to the Fore In Boxing Affairs—Fitzsimmons and McGovern.

Today is the day of the old timers. This conclusion is a just one, as may be proved by a glance at the pugilistic bulletin board.

Our old heavyweight friend Bob Fitzsimmons is to fight "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien. Fitz is an old timer it ever there was one. He is well on toward fifty years of age, and his ring career began almost thirty years ago. Another "once wizzer" is lightweight Terry McGovern, who is to fight Battling Nelson, the Admiral Togo of the pugilistic world. Terry thinks he has a chance against the Danish face destroyer. The fight occurs in Philadelphia on Jan. 26.

Fitzsimmons and McGovern show plenty of spirit in their determination to remain in the ring—the spirit that makes great fighters. Despite his age, Fitz should defeat the Philadelphia fighter for the Cornishman is a master of strategy and even now can deliver a terribly heavy blow.

McGovern's one hope against Nelson lies in the shortness of the bout—six rounds, the Philadelphia limit.

There never has been a doubt of Nelson's qualities as a fighter, but six rounds is not his game. On the other hand, it is a route that is exactly to the liking of the Terrible One. From the first fight that brought the Brooklyn boy into prominence speed has been his very best attribute, and all through the best of his career it was a record of battles that seldom went the six round distance.

Nelson is a lad who shows to best advantage over distances. The full course for him. Under such conditions he is good enough for anybody's money. He will gallop all these boys to death, and when he has them dizzy he only breezes home alone. But how about the sprinting route? It is not so very long ago that a pair of lads who would have no chance with him at the finish game made him look very cheap in a six round sprint. Abe Attell and Kid Sullivan both bested him in Philadelphia. As a matter of fact, it was the result of his fight with Sullivan more than anything else in that young man's career that gave him a chance to come into the limelight. His showing with Nelson made possible his meeting James Edward Britt.

Of course when the Battler put Britt away everything was all serene again, but it was over the full course. It was no six round boxing exhibition that finished James Edward, and there was nothing in that very excellent ring encounter to indicate that Nelson has become a fast six round boxer.

Nelson is sure to be favorite over McGovern, and he should be. Nelson has promised a knockout before the end of the sixth.

Eckersall Chicago's Marvel

Career of the Great Quarterback and Track Athlete, Who Is Premier of All Drop Kickers—He Is the Son of a Swedish Mechanic.

Greater even than John D. Rockefeller's talented tin about Chicago university is the terrible toe of Walter Eckersall, the famous quarterback, runner and drop kicker of the champion university football team. Mr. Rockefeller's money may build and endow colleges. It cannot, at least not directly, kick goals from the field and thus win football games.

Eckersall is the boy who can win these games all by himself. Let his team once get the ball within forty yards of the opponent's goal and at anything like a fair angle and the goal is as good as scored. That adds four points to the team's score.

Eckersall is the most famous of drop kickers and open field runners. In accuracy he overshadows Pat O'Dea, the famous drop kicker of Wisconsin some years ago. In distance he has the accurate Indian Hudson of Carlisle beat many yards. His recent record of five goals in six tries made against Illinois recently breaks all records for successful drop kicking.

Eckersall, the son of a Swedish mechanic, was born in the city of wind twenty-two years ago. He first attracted attention by his great speed of foot when playing hockey with the Hyde Park (Chicago) High school team six years ago. He played quarter and captain for Hyde Park when it beat the crack eastern school team of the Brooklyn Polytechnic 105 points to 0.

The same team was beaten in Chicago the following year by Hyde Park and Eckersall, 59 to 0.

In 1903 Eckersall matriculated at Chicago university. From the very start he was a sensational player. His speed has always been his chief distinguishing feature. Later came his ability to drop kick goals.

This almighty ball booter is also a star track athlete and a good baseball player. He made an intercollegiate record in the fifty yard dash and has run 100 yards in 10 seconds flat.

Even in football Eckersall shows his track instincts. Yost, the Michigan coach, says that he cannot run around his own left end. He must always keep opposing tacklers on his left side.

This, Yost says, is probably due to his early practice on the running track. Yost says that Eckersall has never been able to pull off any of his long runs against Michigan, because the Wolverines have managed to keep his right hand pretty close to the lines on the side of the field. This does not give him room for his runs, and when he went the other way they found little trouble getting him.

Coch Shuck of Chicago uses Eckersall strictly as a kicking and end runner. The boy wears the lightest of clothes and shoes. He carries scarcely any padding in his breeches.

Secretary Bonaparte has been compelled to decline the invitation to attend the convention of the National Civil Service Reform league at Milwaukee on Dec. 14.

THE AUTOMOBILE IN INDIA.

Has Made a Hit with Wealthy Natives Who Take to It in a Hurry.

Motoring for pleasure and for utility purposes would seem to have firmly established itself in India. The fast speeding car was just the thing to appeal to the wealthy native, and hence it is that in Calcutta and Bombay elegant motor cars are very familiar objects.

In Bombay the wealthy Parsee, Mohammedan and Hindoo are in the majority. The European takes a back seat, so to speak, and thus we see the most fashionable car the property of the native who thoroughly delights in this fascinating means of locomotion. Speed and reliability trials have done a great deal to make motoring fashionable, and in India, at any rate, there is a great future before the automobile.

The business man now discards his gharry, but saves time and money by using his latest motor car. The tiffin gharry wallah is becoming really alarmed, for his hire is in less request, and soon he may pass off the face of the earth altogether.

The recent reliability trials, Poona to Satara and back, for the Aga Khan's cup, showed up a six horse-power car in a very favorable light. This car, driven by Lieut. Jenkins, won the cup, but, while it did so well, other cars acquitted themselves most creditably and demonstrated that reliability is assured to users of motor cars in India.

Every native ruler and chief in the country now possesses a stableful of motor cars, and when the prince and princess of Wales pay their visits to these native potentates they will be met, not on elephants clothed with heavy gold raiment, but in the most up-to-date twentieth century motor car.

PIG'S LONG JOURNEY HOME

Young Porker Swims Two Rivers and Travels Several Miles to Get Back.

A farmer living down toward Harvard's had a most knowing pig which he sold to a Little Islander, who took his prize in a boat to his home at the island, reports the Kennebec Journal. Safely shut up in the spacious pig pen was this new inmate of the family, and the farmer man went peacefully to rest, much content with his new purchase.

In the morning the pen was empty and no little pig could be found on the island. Some time afterward he went again to town and there saw the first owner of the lost one. "I've lost my pig," he gloomily announced. "I know it," chuckled his friend. "He's down in my house, came back the next morning."

What had that homesick little pig done but swim across two rivers, the Little Island river and the Kennebec, walked across Big Little Island, trotted happily down the two miles of road, on the Richmond shore, and finally presented himself to his old master, footsore and hungry, but mighty glad to be home once more.

CHILDREN CLEAN STREETS.

Youngsters of Wisconsin Town Band Together for That Purpose.

"Not many cities of the same size go ahead of Sheboygan for public spirit," says a citizen of Chicago, according to the Milwaukee Sentinel. "I have just returned from my first visit to the city and it was a revelation."

"The school children all wear green buttons, and after I had seen several hundred of these about the streets I asked a merchant what they signified. He said that the children had all been banded into a society to keep the city neat and clean. Each child who joins is given a button, and from then on it is his duty to keep the streets and yards cleared of the little bits of paper and other waste material which present such an unsightly appearance."

"The youngsters have entered thoroughly into the spirit of the thing. They have collected more than $100 by popular subscription, and with this money they are planning to purchase waste paper boxes to be put on the different street corners."

English Towns in France.

"La Monde Moderne," of Paris, describes two little English cities near Paris. Chantilly and Maisons-Lafitte have become Anglified because of the racing establishments there. Their streets are filled with English sportsmen, English horse trainers and English jockeys. A great stable is labeled in capitals "Box Hall," a bar has the sign "English Tavern," and there is an English Protestant Episcopal church. The English rector and curate are familiar figures in the town. Altogether these cities have become about as English as anything in England.

The Ideal Fish.

While scientists are taking liberties with flowers, fruits and vegetables, why don't they try their hands on fishes? The man who will invent a fish having the properties of the pompano and the shad will confer a blessing on epicures and mankind. Think of a fish having as few bones as the pompano and the delicious flavor and tenderness of the shad. Get busy, Messrs. Scientists.

Different Next Day.

"You should have heard Bangs roasting Goodley last night. He used some pretty hard words."

"Yes, but they didn't seem so hard to Bangs last night as they did this morning."

"How do you mean?"

"He had to eat them this morning."
